

M-100202

A diagram illustrating the stroke order and structure of the handwritten text "M-100202". The text is rendered in a thick red font. A green crosshair is positioned at the bottom left, with a dashed blue line extending from it to a small blue square on the baseline of the letter "M". This line indicates the starting point and direction of the first stroke. Subsequent dashed blue lines trace the paths of the other strokes: the vertical and diagonal strokes of "M", the horizontal stroke of the hyphen, the vertical stroke of "1", the two loops of the first "0", the two loops of the second "0", the two strokes of the first "2", the two loops of the third "0", and the two strokes of the final "2". Faint gray circles are overlaid on the loops of the "0"s and the curves of the "2"s, likely representing the circular paths of the pen strokes.
